

Tiffany Miller was born and raised in Black Eagle, Montana. She grew up traveling, camping, hiking, and exploring her natural environment with her family. After graduating high school in 1997, Tiffany traveled the world as a member of Up With People, an international learning program. During her year of international travel, she gained personal and professional growth through performing arts, community service, and home stays with local families. An adventurer at heart, she has since independently traveled through Japan, Thailand, Africa, and Europe. By means of her journeys, Tiffany discovered the beauty of cultural diversity and the importance of creative expression.

In addition to her love of travel and the arts, Tiffany has an affinity for children and is invested in promoting each child's unique learning styles and abilities. She has worked and volunteered in a myriad of different settings where children of all ages and backgrounds were the focus. Her personal interest in art and passion for promoting successful learning in children converged, resulting in her professional goal and dream to become an art teacher. Tiffany completed her degree in Art Education at the University of Montana. She is enthusiastic about teaching at St. Joseph's and has enjoyed working with its students, family members, and staff.
